GOETHE has said that Youth plans to build palaces for mankind, but when the moment comes he finds his hands are full with clearing away the rubbish.

Anyone who attempts a collection of family wills in this country will find that no basis is sure in human affairs, but he will also learn the deep interest of the past, and that human wills, in the short 500 years which we can examine, do not differ very much between 1400 and 1900. Unhouseled, disappointed, unanealed, I send these pages out, well knowing that the countless imperfections which attend the making of any Calendar would have been a thousand times greater without the assiduous care of Miss Lucy Farrer, Mr. F. M. Farrar, and my Secretary, Miss A. M. Collard. They and I will welcome the severest criticism, but will even more appreciate additional information.

Abinger, Dorking

With Lord Farrer's Compliments

1.-ROGER LE FERROUR.

1309/10. [Proved.] Roger le Ferrour. To Ralph, Richard and Thomas his sons his tenement upon Cornhill in successive tail, without power of altering the same so long as any of his kinsfolk are alive, and subject to the main-tenance of a chantry for the benefit of Henry de Greneford and Emma wife of the same, in the Church of All Hallows de Gresechurche for 3 years. Also to the said Ralph and Richard the reversion of a tenement in St. Sepulchre's without Newgate, after the decease of Emma his wife. To the said Emma all his movables and immovables at Kyngestone. To London Bridge two shillings London Bridge two shillings.

(Pr. Monday next before St Gregory Pope [Mar. 12] 1309/10.)

As to the devise to the said Ralph, Richard and Thomas, the devise was accepted and administration granted up to the clause relating to non-alienation, because that condition would be contrary to all law, and also contrary to the custom of the City because the Testator said "so long as any of his kinsfolk are alive." Accordingly that clause is annulled by the judgment of the Court, the whole of the remainder standing good according to the last will of the said testator.

(Hustings, London 38/81.)

Judgment that the will of John Farrer is valid after full hearing and ample discussion before me Sir Nathaniel Brent D. of Prerogative Court in respect of the will of John Farrer, in the case between William Farrer executor of the will and son of deceased and John Farrer also a son of the defunct. Both appeared before us and we now give this definitive judgment.... Because we hold the intention of the deceased was as described in the will produced by William Farrer and that John Farrer has in no way produced anything on his part to weaken it Farrer has in no way produced anything on his part to weaken it. Therefore we Nathaniel Brent [?]D'Laws [?]declare that William the son and Susan the wife are the executors of the said last will and we declare this to be our final judgment pronounced. 5 Feb. 1650.
